The entire top half of the inside section is in. Use the side panel and lower front panel to finish with the two spacers. Add the rubber liner (it's about 3/8th of an inch thick) to the lower front panel. Step 2: Mounting the Electronics This front panel has LEDs and a small motor connected to it. We decided to add the motor and hookup cables to the outside of the panel. This leaves you a small 5" (127mm) open space behind the panel for the electronics. The main reason we did it this way is because we have a place on the front panel to mount the rotary encoder we are using for steering (and other reasons). Having the motors and wires on the outside, we could mount the panel flush to the body. The wiring isn't hard to do. This is what we did: Wire Up The best way to do this is to have a pair of wires the same color coming out of the top of the back panel. This will help keep them straight. Attaching the Mini-Bubble The small bubble on the front of the robot was a bit of a challenge to attach. So we decided to just use some Z-Clips to hold the bubble in place. Step 3: Attaching the LED's After cutting the hole for the two LED's you'll also want to drill another hole in the panel to put the two wires coming out of the back panel. Step 4: Connecting the LED's The pre-wired connectors are slightly more expensive then just cutting the wires and crimping them together. But we did have a ton of them laying around. Step 5: Assembly All of the final pieces are placed, marked, drilled and screwed. Finally, we wanted to put the back panel on. In some cases you can solder the wires together directly, but a bit of heat will have to be used. I prefer to use a heat gun to get the end of the cable to bend so it's not so tight (stiff). But you will have to experiment with what works best for you. The last thing to do is to attach the motors. You have a lot of options here. You can have the motors both above and below, or on either side. We decided to have the motors back in the holes we cut into the side panels. The

These are: SSC, CC, CCC, CCCCSS The question asks you to find the probability of the last sequence given that the first three are SCS, SCCS, SCCCS. The answer I got was  $\frac{1}{125}$ , but it must be incorrect. Please prove that my solution is correct. Here is my work:
$$P(A) = \frac{1}{4^4}P(A|A) + \frac{1}{4^4}P(A|B) + \frac{1}{4^4}P(A|C) \setminus P(B) = \frac{1}{4^4}P(B|B) + \frac{1}{4^4}P$$
