What does Disavow Tool do? ...Q: How to dynamically delete a "folder" of files using fstream? I need to write a command-line program that deletes files with a particular name if they exist. I am not familiar with the operating system command-line interface, so I was told to use fstream to do it. The folder structure of files is similar to this: new folder1 - file1.txt - file2.txt - file3.txt I need to delete files1.txt and file3.txt if they exist in this folder. However, the name and the file content of files1.txt and file3.txt is not known. There will be dozens of such file structures in the folder. I have tried this code, but it doesn't work: fstream removeFile1, removeFile3; removeFile1.open("file1.txt", ios::in); removeFile3.open("file3.txt", ios::in); if (removeFile1.is_open() && removeFile3.is_open()) { removeFile1.seekp(-4, ios::cur); removeFile3.seekp(-4, ios::cur); while (removeFile3.read(buffer, 4)!= -1 && removeFile1.read(buffer, 4)!= -1) removeFile1.write(buffer, 4); removeFile1.close(); removeFile3.close(); } else { cout I highly recommend this web design package. It's basic and easy to use and the support when something goes wrong is very fast. The icons that come with it are decent quality, too. [Nov 20, 2012] Very impressed... Throughput ratings are a great tool if you want to estimate the number of visitors coming to your website. The support is super quick
