Q: Performance of XML parsing vs JSON/JSONP What is more efficient to process: JSON or XML? We are looking to provide serverside JS/HTML. We would like to provide some sort of progress indication to the user so we want to use the serverside code as we can't get this out of the browser. We would like to be able to use the server to return the data and the user will be able to access the data using different methods through the site (i.e. just the HTML version or via the JS version that will be built into the page). As we don't know exactly what the data will be used for - just basically to show some sort of progress to the user - will JSON/JSONP be quicker to process than XML, which is generally used for structured data?

A: It depends on your use case. If your aim is to simply display data to the user, then there is no difference. JSON is essentially a glorified XML anyway. If the data is then going to be passed onto the client-side, then JSON has the advantage of being a subset of the JavaScript data-type. You can use JavaScript object literals to store data - and then JSON.parse(theText) is what you need to turn that data into a JavaScript object. Finally, your XML could encode the data as JavaScript via using the JSON that some of the libraries already provide, so JSON becomes more efficient as you don't need to produce JSON on the server. In short, it's just JSON. See: A: JSON is much faster to parse than XML is. That's for sure. In terms of internal data format, JSON is just a subset of JavaScript objects. JSON only holds name value pairs. Some time ago I converted my large JSON to JavaScript objects (NameValuePair class). It was about a hundred times faster to load than plain JSON. A: You should

B.O.B. Rapid Browser

B.O.B. Rapid Browser is a reliable application for Internet navigation that can easily run in parallel with other similar programs. The software allows you to visit any webpage, watch online videos or listen to music, as well as download media content from hosting websites. Moreover, you may create a custom collection of bookmarks. Bookmarked or favorite webpages B.O.B. Rapid Browser is a reliable Internet navigation program, which allows you to quickly access your favorite websites, by clicking on their thumbnails. The software's interface is divided into two areas, one where you can view the contents of the current website and the collection of bookmarked pages. By default the collection area stays hidden, so that you may view the website's contents, but it instantly appears when you move your cursor towards the right edge of the window. The bookmarks collection is divided into several tabs, according to categories and field of activity: commercial channels, movies, email services, social networking and other visited websites. Moreover, you may view the video downloads in a dedicated tab as well. Internet navigation helper B.O.B. Rapid Browser allows you to visit several websites at the same time, by opening them in separate tabs. You simply need to click on the empty square at the bottom of the window, in order to open a new tab. It is easy to navigate back and forth to recently visited pages, using the designated buttons. The home page corresponds with the website set with the default Internet browser on your computer. The Add Site and Delete Site buttons allow you to add or remove the currently accessed page from the bookmarks collection. The Download function copies the YouTube (or a different video hosting website) URL to the clipboard, in order to acquire the media content. About Mime MIME (Multipurpose Internet Mail Extensions) is a standard for encoding and addressing computer files for the internet. MIME allows websites and email servers to more efficiently manage the transfer of data. MIME is used in modern browsers and in email servers. Using MIME, your computer can be configured to recognize websites, but not all websites use MIME. One of the great benefits of MIME is that it gives your computer the ability to read, send and receive email. MIME allows you to use your favorite programs and features in a web browser without having to learn a different program. You can click on a link, copy a website address, and
