Definitely not the only method of controlling Windows volume Compatible with all versions of Windows 10, 8.1, 8, 7, Vista, and XP Exclusive integration with the standard Windows system settings Controls system volume without restarting the computer Limitations: Does not show up in the taskbar Does not show up in the Start menu Does not show up in the system tray Does not offer the ability to control individual volume levels for sound or devices If you're among those who spend a lot of time on the Internet, then you're undoubtedly familiar with the famous and reputable Pandora radio. It's certainly the most popular online music streaming platform that offers music, podcasts and radio streaming. Additionally, it also has the tendency to be associated with the famous and well-respected Free Online Music Player, iTunes. While iTunes has been around for ages and has actually been the standard way of streaming music, Pandora has been around since the year 2001, and it's remained a clear leader in online music streaming. However, as anyone would have thought, both Pandora and iTunes are not free to use, and to use those, you need to pay for a subscription. Then, there was a time when free Pandora premium accounts were going to be a thing of the past. As a matter of fact, in 2015, Pandora was going to roll out paid versions of the service. However, it didn't happen, and even though we're not sure whether there are free accounts anymore, there are a lot of premium accounts that seem to be generating quite a bit of revenue for the streaming service. Regardless of whether you're using a free Pandora account, or the paid one, you're not going to be disappointed with the music streaming service. It's entirely customisable, it's extremely easy to use, and it's actually one of the best ways to listen to music. Additionally, if you're using the free version, you can use the Tunein app that can stream similar content. It's far from being as good as what Pandora offers, but it has a lot of positive feedback for users. On the other hand, if you're using the paid version, then it's the Pandora Radio that's going to do it for you. You can create as many playlists as you want
