Sprint Vector takes the satisfying mechanics of a side-scrolling 2D platformer and remolds them into a VR experience unlike any other. Set in a hostile, neon-fuelled cityscape, players navigate their way through a series of electrifying courses, collecting power and shrugging off aggressive enemies along the way. Use your powers to guide your character into the next structure or leap out of a building to gain speed, and when you're feeling fast enough, unleash a special power that lets you hover for a brief moment before jumping. There are no teleporters here. You'll have to leap from one building to the next by power-jumping to reach the top. Chasing after the neon-crazed runner is a unique experience that keeps you engaged from start to finish. In Sprint Vector players are only limited by their imagination. Sprint Vector

Nominated for the 2014 VR Game of the Year at the NextVR VRX Awards in San Jose, CA. "I've never quite seen a VR game so quickly translate from a side-scrolling 2D platformer to a first-person 3D platformer. It's a sign of just how much fun the game is." - Donny Muchnick, Feargus Urquhart, Editor-in-Chief, Game Informer "The game is entirely made of movements, and that's both exhilarating and terrible." - Forbes "It's the most impressive VR game to come out of a VR startup in the past few years." - Forbes 8 The best VR game in years The HTC Vive's launch lineup was a disappointing mix of relatively unimpressive rehashed titles, but Sprint Vector from Owlchemy Labs, that could easily be seen as the best VR game in years. Sprint Vector is an excellent platformer which takes the feel of a classic 2D platformer and pulls it into the much more immersive medium of VR. Not only is the game fun but it also challenges your mind as the amazing visuals and VR mechanics add something new to the genre. The title is entirely made of movements, and that's both exhilarating and terrible, but this game proves it does not matter if the player has a physical or virtual body, they are both equally important in pulling off the awesome stunts Sprint Vector requires. There's no teleportation in the game and that makes c9d1549cdd

How to install the Aerosoft Vaeroy airport download on X-Plane 11 This installer consists of the video chapter embedded as Quicktime video file. You need Quicktime Player installed on your computer to watch the video.

Note: All installers are in ZIP format. You must have WinRAR on your computer. A free version of WinRAR is available here. Please upgrade your WinRAR software before proceeding. Download the following installer (1), save it and extract the files to your computer hard disk. A folder called "Vaeroy" will be extracted to the directory you start the installation. Note: The executable file airportcal is installed in the folder with the same name as airportcal.app itself. (See App Menu > "Exit/Quick Start/Aerosoft airportcal") Load the application Open the folder you have just extracted. Launch airportcal. App Load the application, choose the airport Vaeroy from the Airport List and click "Open". Figure 1: The update procedure for Aerosoft airport code Vaeroy Note: The application starts as you click on the icon. Click on the "Done" checkmark to save the settings and continue. Figure 2: Select the airport aircraft type you want to update. You have to select two values of the absolute height, one in m and the other in feet (above top). This parameter gives to the AI pilot flight simulators the Airbus A310 cockpit. Apply aeronautical glideslope You have to install a new module in xplane 11 called "Aerosoft". Click on App Menu (the small menu icon above the screen) > "Exit/Quick Start" > "Aerosoft" > "Hello world" Set a value in the aeronautical glideslope sector (Normal/Positive or Normal/Negative) according to the blue plane approach sector chart (Figure 3, 1 m in green and Negative 1 in red). Save the settings Figure 3: Configure the aeronautical glideslope for the aircraft type Note: Airport code and glideslope sector remain fixed for the aircraft configuration. But the scale of the grid is independent on the aircraft configuration. Figure 4: Number of ground links to add to the airport This function is active for the aircraft type.
