We can only hope that at some point in the future the last record will be broken. The record for the highest consumption of a vegetable has already been broken. In the US, cabbage has now replaced carrots as the most consumed vegetable! The world record for the highest consumption of any vegetable is held by the Dominican Republic (25.59 kg). The Dominican Republic at the moment, is not actually a vegetable. I assume a lot of people confused it with chili peppers. The Mexican people, who eat the most chili peppers, are especially known for the high consumption of chili peppers. The USA is the largest producer of chili peppers and thus of these pleasant little fruits. The biggest producer of the cabbage is Japan. This vegetable is so well grown that women are allowed to wear shorts during the day. It can be eaten for breakfast, for dinner or for a midnight snack. Cabbage is a very nutritional vegetable. The fibre in cabbage helps you feel full for longer. The nutrition value is very high. Studies have shown that cabbage lowers cholesterol levels and prevents colon cancer. e79caf774b

The problem is, it takes a very long time to parse the file - my application keeps freezing for around 10 seconds every time I perform a gson parse. I'd like to limit the GSON instances - is this possible? Can I instantiate a new gson instance every time an object is deserialized? Here's the code I'm using. Gson gson = new Gson(); BufferedReader br = null; try { gson.fromJson(StringUtils.readFileToString(filePath), Clans.class); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } catch (JsonSyntaxException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } catch (ParseException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } finally { if (br!= null) { try { br.close(); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } } } I'd like to do something similar to this: Gson gson = new Gson(); BufferedReader br = null; try { gson.fromJson(StringUtils.readFileToString(filePath), Clans.class); // If this is > 1MB of JSON, I want to create a new GSON instance // and parse the JSON again. } catch (IOException e) {
