Q: Applying new php & codeigniter version I am fairly new to the latest version of php and codeigniter. I do not understand what the "wp-content/mu-plugins" directory, the "wp-includes" directory or the "wp-content/themes" directory are for. My question is: do I really need them in my codeigniter project? If I have an application folder with all the codeigniter files and files in application/config, application/controllers, application/libraries, application/models,application/views and application/... what do I need all these new directories for? This is my first time using codeigniter and learning it quickly has me confused. Thanks for your help! A: They aren't directories. They are the roots of the folders which contain the codeigniter documentation and source. If you are not finding the codeigniter documentation, you'll need to reference the codes that were put in these directories and work with the file to understand more about codeigniter. The point of these directories is that they place the code for the CMS\ framework at those areas in the filesystem so codeigniter becomes visually clean in its structure.

Often you may want to make a copy of those directories and place the copy in the application folder, because it's where your website files normally reside so it makes room for your site. Here Isaiah captures Israel's rebellion to God's will with remarkable vividness. Jesus, Zechariah, and John call for true worship as they press the themes of God's sovereignty and God's
