Blitzkrieg is a real time strategy game where players must fight an epic struggle for the military and economic domination of the European continent during World War II. The scale of operations is large, with armies, fleets and air forces used to represent vast territory. Two campaigns (1939 and 1942) and six periods (1939-41, 1941-43, 1943, 1943-44, 1944-45, 1945) enable players to experience large-scale military action during the last four years of the conflict. This is not a step-by-step campaign. You will encounter this level of difficulty if you play for a full evening of tank battles in a turn-based skirmish. This is a game of a variety of vehicles, where one can play the most important role - a tank, but they can also be infantry carriers, artillery and air attacks, etc. The level of difficulty is a little higher than other titles of the series (such as "Cheesy Cozy Pass", "Waterless Canal", "Kremlingame Jungle" etc.). Key Features: 1. A vast area of over 36 sq. km. 2. Land and aerial vehicles, infantry and artillery. 3. Full arsenal of artillery: 250 shells (incl. AP, HE) of 40 various types. 4. Extremely good graphic design, excellent manual for all the situations. 5. Battle system allows you to fight both with the artillery and with tank guns. 6. Added complexity of terrain and diverse tactics make the game balanced and do not leave players indifferent. ...and much more!1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a document processing apparatus and, more particularly, to a document processing apparatus which includes an output device, such as a printer, to be used with a printing system capable of outputting image information stored in an external storage device to a display device of a host computer, a document processing apparatus which is able to select an external storage device for storing image information to be output, a document processing apparatus which is able to implement document search and document sorting by the use of the image information stored in the external storage device, a document processing apparatus which is able to automatically output documents in a printing system and also able to display the printed documents, and a document processing system using the same. 2. Related Background Art In recent years, the number of documents handled in an office and the variety of the documents have been increasing year by year. To cope with this tendency, there have been proposed various systems for handling documents in office, such as a system for classifying documents, a system for reprinting documents, a system for automatically checking and collating various kinds of documents, a system for reprinting all documents, a system for automatically retrieving documents, and a system for automatically printing documents. Also, there have been proposed an automatic filing system for filing documents, an electronic mail system for filing documents by electronic mail, and a document retrieval system. November 25, 1942, the American tanks were attacked on the second day of fighting in the operation to clear the pass near Djedeida. The first operation of the day was led by 3rd Company of the 1st Battalion of the 6th Regiment of the 1st Armored Division. A group of German tanks moved to the area of the village of Chouigui, to which a group of American tanks moved to the area of the village of Tebourba, where they destroyed 3 tanks. After this successful operation, the American tanks reached a ridge and were attacked by about 10 German tanks. Despite the attacks of the Germans, the American tanks managed to damage the first five tanks, and in the process the American company succeeded in damaging a number of the tanks in the company of the German company. 1st Company of the 1st Battalion of the 6th Regiment, under the command of Major Frank Wood, reached the position of the German tanks, and despite the fact that the company was attacked from two sides, a number of the tanks managed to reach the village of Chouigui, where the German tanks were stopped. Unfortunately, this German group was discovered by the US tanks, which were followed by their artillery. American tanks were able to return fire and destroy 6 tanks, which were responsible for the deaths of several soldiers. The German tanks were also damaged and retreated. As a result, in this battle for Chouigui, the American forces and equipment lost 6 tanks, and 5 tanks were destroyed by the Germans. On the other hand, the Germans lost 6 tanks. The result of the second operation of the day: the US forces won the battle, and the Germans lost 6 tanks. This operation took place between the villages of Chouigui and Tebourba, on the axes 0,1 (now 1). November 25, 1942. Despite a fierce battle, the US forces reached the area of Chouigui Pass, and advanced into the region of Tebourba. The German forces were engaged in the battle for this area. In the next phase, the US forces launched their second attack. The American troops were located in the region of Chouigui Pass, near the village of Tebourba. The Germans prepared to launch their attack on the US troops. After 3 turns of the battle, the US troops were very successful. They completely annihilated the entire German force. In this battle, the US forces sustained the loss of 4 men. The Germans lost 2 tanks. The result of the second attack was

What's new in Tank Warfare: Chewy Gooley Pass:

-- I'm cheating a little here by saying my point of view will reference the Galactic Civilizations 3 beta and if I don't feel like straying out of my personal obsessions, then I'll do Galactic Civilizations IV. In strategy games, there's a best and a worst use of your resources. You think you're being wasteful and depriving yourself of what you so desperately need because you've got 3 units of one resource down. One unit of the resource might not necessarily matter. What you'll have a problem with is that you can't use any more, so your production of the valuable resource is shut down and your economy is blocked. A better system is to actually have more than one unit of the same resource. In a perfect world, you'd have as many units of each type you want as you want, but very rarely can a game offer more than one unit of many resources. With a lot of beautiful diversity, this third tactic becomes interesting. Take engine units. They might be the most powerful units in a game, especially in a starfaring game. Now, how often do I play a game of Galactic Civilizations that will actually let me have more than one battle cruiser? -- An engine as in single faction engine (just one), or multi faction engine? Simple, one faction warship unit. One engine and several destroyer craft. This would be your primary source of engine-making. Sure, you can try to grab yourself 5 or 6 battle cruisers, but the only way you'll get more than one is if you somehow can grab 5 or 6 ships by the bulk system. That's not going to be a very common occurrence. Last night, I enjoyed a nice game of the beta where I only had one fighter pilot unit and two scout planes. I also played two Empire games, one where I very much desired more than one battle cruiser, and one where I had literally none. The Empire is a different story, because you're only allowed three battle cruisers. Sure, you could theoretically grab 6, but nobody really gets anywhere near 6, much less the logistics to get 6, much less the mechanics to develop 6 battle cruisers. The point of all this is that as a player, it can sometimes be worse to have too many engines or army squads, or too many defence or ship slots. It can be very bad for your playability, if you're supposed to have 700 slots and what will
