Sri Lanka Army Air Force Sri Lanka Army Air Force Sri Lanka Army Air Force Sri Lanka's official Air force. The SriLanka ArmyAir Force was founded in 1941, but its first military use did not occur until the Pacific War. Despite a slow start of equipment, the air force was able to use only a small airstrip near Jaffna for training. In July 1942, the Japanese began striking British bases. That same year, the United States Army's 509th Composite Group arrived in the area and began to equip and train the air force. In the beginning of 1943, a few American B-24 Liberator heavy bombers began to fly air supply missions to Ceylon. By March, the U.S. had given up all efforts of supporting the air force as it lost interest in the military campaign. At the end of 1943, the British arrived with ground forces in Jaffna and began the Siege of Jaffna. The air force was critical to the British' s success, especially since transport links with the United Kingdom were cut by the Japanese. In March 1944, the Americans began to assist the SriLanka Army Air Force again in the War. On 27th May, Allied planes dropped supplies on Ceylon's capital Colombo. Continued support of the SriLanka Army Air Force was the least the Allies could do after all the services the air force had given them. In 1945, the year of the Japanese surrender, the SriLanka Army Air Force
