This Woman, Her Love and Her Orphans This Woman, Her Love and Her Orphans is a novel by Sherman Alexie. It was published in 2007 by Graywolf Press. Plot The title of the book refers to a quote from the Bhagavad Gita, "I am become Death, the shatterer of worlds." The fictional main character, Sara Jamison, is a teacher of Native American descent at a Western boarding school. Her school, like many boarding schools in American history, is intended to help assimilate American Indians into mainstream American society. Many of the students are of mixed blood, and some despise their Indian heritage. Sara experiences a number of problems, such as the death of her brother in an auto accident and the rejection of her parents' proposal that she marry a white man and assimilate into white society
