It was built in 1600 for Count Waldsee von Radevormwald, who served as a second cousin of the owner of the Jülich castle, Prince-Bishop Hieronymus Gundelfinger. History In 1612 Count Henry VIII of Waldsee was given the surrounding area for hunting, including the Marcken Villa Am Stellenried. The villa had an ornate 16th-century arcaded front with an oriel window on each of the three sides of the central section. There are also two small pavilions in the garden. After Count Waldsee had been imprisoned and fled to France in 1618, the estate was given to Waldsee's second cousin, Prussian Count Christoph von der Ahle. In 1627 von der Ahle built the Schloss Radevormwald near the villa. The castellated Rococo-style building was the seat of various counts of Waldsee. The last count, who died in 1964, left the house and surrounding park to the charitable Stellenriedsheim Foundation. The villa was bought by Klaus Heistermann-Waldsee, and his wife Annelies at the end of the 20th century. It was partially renovated in 2009. Architecture The original Renaissance building is noted for its arcaded facade, with columns, pilasters and pediments. The original Renaissance building is crowned with a three-storied stepped turret and has two pavilions set in the garden.
