FIFA (FIFA video games) is known as the "the official video game of the FIFA series, as well as the "the best-selling sports simulation video game." Designed around the engine used in the FIFA series, it is playable on PlayStation 2, Xbox 360, and the PC. It was first released for the PlayStation 2 in October 2001 and has been released approximately every year since. The most recent edition of the game was the Fifa 22 Crack Mac, which was released on October 2, 2016. Contents Gameplay The focus of gameplay in FIFA is centered around player management, player training, and match strategy. Two teams of players compete on a rectangular pitch. The pitch is split into small sections called "zones". Zones provide gameplay variety to the game, and tactics can be based on the zone in which a player is found. Each "game" is a set of two halves of the pitch. The team that scores the most goals by the end of the game, known as the "winners" is considered to be the "winning team" in the game, whereas the team that records the fewest goals is considered to be the "defending team". There are several features not found in other sports games. First, in real life, the management of a team does not happen in a vacuum. The manager must follow the tactics of his team, and make decisions that both support the team, and move the team forward as a single entity. As a result, player management is particularly important. Players are placed into specific "positions" on the pitch based on their strengths. Players play the ball to make runs, try to get in on tackles, and "finish" the play. When a game starts, a set of players is drawn by lot into the teams and each has a "real life" team to play for, but the game is not solely focused on player management. In the basic game, two teams play several matches in a set schedule. During the course of each match, the teams earn points based on the outcome of the game. The team with more points after the match is considered to be the winning team. The points for each match are tallied and the team with the most points by the end of the season is crowned as the winning team. The game also features "FIFA Ultimate Team" Mode and a special Training Mode. Ultimate Team allows players to build and manage their very own virtual team of custom players and make player trades
