though most people only use the h-tint tool. Another useful feature is the skin tool. The color correction tool has a histogram feature which allows you to split the R, G, B, and A (amplitude) into hues. As you are fixing the values you can click on the hues in the tool and then move it into the correct location. There are two features in the htint tool: the Drag and drop feature, and the brush tool. The Drag and drop is very useful because you can drag the hue wheel to where you want it to go. The drag will have the intensity of where you drag it. When you apply you have to be careful when moving the hue wheel. It will not adjust itself. You have to grab it in the hue wheel and move it. The brush tool allows you to apply a specific hue, and it will help you apply the hue more accurately. When you click on the hue wheel it will change the hue slightly. It will then start to apply that hue to the image. Clicking on the hues will change the hue if you select it. If you click on it several times it will apply the hue until you can change the hue.
