[album] SkyMedia by gospek KO 2010. Sydney, 22 September 2018 — Any large utility undertaking (ULU) projects involving land are faced with the risk of a severe reaction from the public if they are seen to be damaging the environment. Governments' reaction to environmental impact has evolved into an acceptance of these impacts, with business proving its worth through post approval impact mitigation measures. However, the changing public tolerance of environmental impact and the use of mandatory impact mitigation measures ("the great divide") has created a crisis for the provision of electrical infrastructure over large distances. The issue is that the electricity grid will continue to expand and the current electricity grid cannot be continued to function without destructive land clearing. Australia's population is increasing exponentially and there is a continuing need to expand the grid. For the first time, today the Electricity Networks Coordination Committee (ENCOC) convened a group of expert practitioners, including from the utility sector, private sector, government and the community and reported on the issues, including: It was recommended that ENCOC develop a strategy to effectively manage the land use element of the great divide, while ensuring the utilities meet their legal obligations and expectations. ENCC will continue its work on the great divide which will report back to the Minister for Climate Change and Energy, Josh Frydenberg, on the broader industry participation in the creation of a national solution. This year, for the first time, we celebrate the many festivals and religious observances that touch the lives of our community. Festival of San Anton is a splendid opportunity to enjoy food, music and dance that reminds us of our cultural heritage and traditions. We are delighted to welcome your participation in this celebration! The Festival of San Anton was created in 1964 by the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce (HCC) to be the premier Hispanic festival in North Texas. The objective of the Festival is to promote tourism in the State of Texas and to enhance the cultural experience of visitors. Through the many different events and activities, we hope to promote the cultural heritage of 6d1f23a050
