To this partition, the z/OS DB2 loader loads the Autodata application. From here on, the application uses z/OS TSO (IBM mainframe and z/VM instance identification) to identify itself to the z/VM partition, and then login to its IBM mainframe zone using an account defined in the system initialization files. From here, Autodata uses z/VM that includes an exact copy of Autodata's Linux zone. This allows Autodata and its Linux zone to safely access a full Linux feature set. After loading Autodata the Linux zone, Autodata loads its user interface. Autodata's GUI allows it to be run as a x86 16-bit application or a z/VM 32-bit application. Autodata's GUI can also load an x86-64 Linux zone (with optional x86 software to run from an autoloader). The GUI then allows for Linux features to be accessed using the z/OS MVS system or managed using the Linux command line. Autodata also allows for the management of MVS systems from a Linux zone as well as the z/OS system manager and MVS management toolbox. Autodata has also expanded its ability to monitor, analyze, and respond to condition and inventory alerts from MVS systems. Autodata 3.38 is a significant release of the IBM z/VSE based Autodata application that further enhances the service Autodata provides. New enhancements include the ability to port from z/OS zones to Linux zones using an Autoloader, the ability to monitor, analyze, and respond to MVS or z/OS condition or inventory events, the ability to manage Linux tools from the Autodata GUI, and the ability to create Linux zones from a Linux zone. Vitec AutoData uses its IBM z/VSE partition to run and develop its core applications in COBOL and CICS. To complement these core services, and to support new front-end applications connecting to them, Vitec AutoData now runs around 25 instances of SUSE Linux Enterprise Server for z Systems as guests on a z/VM partition. To this partition, the z/OS DB2 loader loads the Autodata application. From here on, the application uses z/OS TSO (IBM mainframe and z/VM instance identification) to identify itself to the z/VM partition, and then login to its IBM mainframe zone using an account defined in the system initialization files. Autodata Limited is announcing a new product in the Autodata online workshop, Autodata TM. Autodata TM is a technology, mobile-based, web-based network that works without any line access to the internet and will be available to Autodata customers for just £79.95 a month. Users will be able to choose to join and access the service on any of their PCs, tablets or mobile devices - simply log on to the Autodata TM web portal and select what they want to access, and what information they want to download. The Autodata TM network now covers all the Autodata modules, including the Autodata Carsharing, Autodata Car Performance, Autodata Car Tech, Autodata Vehicle Performance, Autodata Vehicle Technical, Autodata Car, Autodata Traffic and Autodata Fleet. Combined with the existing Autodata Online Workshop, this enables users to access all the Autodata modules from any device at any time and, by subscription, from anywhere in the world. As Autodata is now part of a large and growing company, Autodata is announcing a new regional office to cover the Baltic states, after a period of growth for Autodata in its home market in Ireland. The new office will be headed by Dominic Burnside, Autodata's Managing Director, who will continue to lead both the Autodata and Autodata TM operations in Ireland, and will be based in the Autodata TM offices in the centre of Dublin. In addition, Autodata has appointed Neil Dickson as its Regional Sales Director for the Baltics, working closely with Dominic to drive the Autodata TM footprint in this market. Not surprisingly, one of the most popular Autodata modules is the Autodata Online Workshop, which gives vehicle technicians, garages, fleet operators and distributors, and anyone else who wants to make a job easier, a fast and reliable way of accessing technical information and top-quality instructions on new and used vehicles, the same vehicle models that you are working with. 5ec8ef588b
