It's time for Review Day. I have been using Elements for ... well, as long as I can remember. I first used it in the early 90's when it was Elements 2.0, with a whopping 4MB of RAM and a built-in floppy drive. This new version is faster than I remember it, with the 16GB of memory. Enough feigning, no need to pass muster for Impress. Render it. Create a slide show and live broadcast it. It all works seamlessly with Elements and you can do it all with a bare bones system. It's a brilliant quick creation media package with very comprehensive features and functions. I use it daily and I've been using Macs for decades. Why don't you use Lightroom? Are you tired of the heydays that came from the.CR2 files? Are you nostalgic about square pixels? Are you fed up with Chris Terrill's iTunes previews or Mark's promise? Are you frustrated by the "I know what I'm doing" attitude? Well, here you go. When I was a kid, I remember my parents loading a Videotape for me on a slow part of the year, say, winter, and then stopping it and rewinding it to enjoy the same scenes all over. Only in hindsight, I realize that in that small labor, they sometimes skipped a number of wonderful vignette hostesses who spent the whole show on the same couch with the same two guys smoking their pipes and sharing a Scotch. It's just that there was no way to preview them before they had to be shot. I always used to ask them to fast forward before shooting a new take, and they would freeze and mutter, "No", they were done, or "That will have to do". Usually, I new that I would not find a better take.
