He was the first Indian to have captained an Indian and a foreign team in one-day international cricket. Known as the right-arm slow-bowling Cummerbund in the 1990s, he played four one-day matches for the India national team in 1990, including one match at the 1990 ICC Cricket World Cup. His solitary international wicket was that of future Test and One Day International cricketing legend Steve Waugh, at a World Cup match in India in 1996. He retired from international cricket after the 1996 World Cup, and was the first captain to lead a foreign side to victory in an ICC Cricket World Cup, when India won the ICC Cricket World Cup in 1996. Early life Arpan Biswas was born in Kolkata (presently West Bengal) in February 1948, and obtained a BSc (Hons.) from the University of Calcutta. He made his senior cricketing debut at the age of 17, playing for the United Services XI against the MCC during a tour of India in 1969. He is the nephew of the renowned backroom cricketer and former Indian captain AH Kardar. Domestic career In the Ranji Trophy, he played 19 matches for Bengal, scoring 810 runs with a highest score of 155, taking 14 wickets and finishing as the leading run-scorer in the tournament in 1986. International career Biswas made
